

2014-15 ASSOCIATES

IGUCHI Haruo

Nagoya University

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 203
higuchi@wcfia.harvard.edu
New Threats and Comprehensive National Security in U.S.-Japan Relations

Professor Iguchi is Professor of International Studies at Nagoya University. He received his B.A. in Economics from Brown University, M.A. and Ph.D. in History from University of Chicago. His research has focused on U.S.-Japan diplomatic, political and economic relations, and U.S.-East Asia relations. He is the author of Unfinished Business: Ayukawa Yoshisuke and U.S.-Japan Relations, 1937-1953 (Harvard University Asia Center, 2003), winner of the Masayoshi Ohira Memorial Prize, and Ayukawa Yoshisuke and Economic Internationalism (in Japanese, Nagoya University Press, 2012), winner of the Suntory Prize (Politics and Economics Field) and the 2013 Forum for Entrepreneurial Studies Book Prize in Japan. During the 2014-15 academic year, he will examine the new threats and comprehensive national security in U.S.-Japan relations.

IIZUKA Miri

Ministry of Land, Infrastructure, Transport and Tourism

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 302
miizuka@wcfia.harvard.edu International Governance and Competition in the Northern Sea Route

Ms. Iizuka earned her B.A. in Law from Waseda University, Master of Public Policy from the University of Tokyo, and LL.M. from New York University School of Law. Her most recent position at MLIT was Planning and Management Official, Condominiums Policy Office, Urban Building Division, at the Housing Bureau. She has also served in the General Affairs Division and Safety Management and Seafarers Labour Division, both at the Maritime Bureau. Ms. Iizuka's research at Harvard will examine international governance and competition in the Northern Sea Route.

ITO Banri

Senshu University

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 301
bito@wcfia.harvard.edu
Origins of Protectionist Trade Policy Preferences

Professor Ito received his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. in Economics from Keio University. His research focuses on international trade and investment; trade, innovation and intellectual property rights; and trade protection and political economy. Professor Ito's articles have been published in The World Economy, Economic Inquiry, Review of International Economics, Journal of the Japanese and International Economies, China Economic Review, and in other journals and edited volumes. He is also the co-author of Global Innovations (in Japanese; Keio University Press, 2011). While at Harvard, his research project will examine the origins of protectionist policy preferences.

KAJI Yoshiro

Tokyo Gas Co., Ltd.

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 303
ykaji@wcfia.harvard.edu
Managing Employee Diversity in Japanese Corporations

Mr. Kaji earned his B.A. in Economics from Waseda University. At Tokyo Gas Co., Ltd., his most recent position was Manager of the Regional Sales Administration Section in the Air-conditioning and Commercial Customer Development and Service Department. He has also served as Manager, General Affairs Department at Tokyo Gas Chemicals, Researcher at the Keidanren (Japan Business Federation), as well as in the General Affairs Department and the Human Resources Department at Tokyo Gas. While at Harvard, Mr. Kaji will investigate the management of employee diversity in Japanese corporations.

KASAMA Daisuke

Ministry of Economy,
Trade and Industry

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 307
dkasama@wcfia.harvard.edu Impact of Energy and Environmental Policy on U.S.
Automobile Industry

Mr. Kasama received his B.S. and M.S. in Astrophysics from University of Tokyo. His most recent position at METI was Deputy Director of the Information Economy Division in the Commerce and Information Policy Bureau. He has also served in the Automobile Division and Aerospace and Defense Industry Division in the Manufacturing Industries Bureau; Policy Planning Division, Business Environment Department in the Small and Medium Enterprise Agency; and Industrial Science and Technology Policy Division in the Technology Policy and Environment Bureau. Mr. Kasama's research at Harvard will examine how U.S. energy and environmental policies are reshaping its automobile industry.

KIM Doo-seung

Korea Institute for Defense Analyses

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 301
dkim@wcfia.harvard.edu Obama Administration's Rebalancing toward Asia and Japan-Korea Relations

Dr. Kim earned his B.A. in Law, M.A. and Ph.D. in Politics from Rikkyo University. He is currently a Research Fellow at the Center for Security Studies, Korea Institute for Defense Analyses (KIDA) and Policy Advisor for the Ministry of National Defense, Republic of Korea (ROK). He specializes in Japanese security policy and U.S.-Japan-ROK strategic relations. He is the author of Ikedo Administration's Foreign Policy and Japan-Korea Relations (in Japanese; Akashi Shoten, 2008) and Japan's National Defense Program Guidance 2010 and Korea's Security (in Korean; KIDA Press, 2011). At Harvard, his research will focus on Obama administration's rebalancing toward Asia and Japan-Korea Relations.

KOBAYASHI Yoshiki

National Police Agency

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 303
ykobayashi@wcfia.harvard.edu Criminal Investigation Methods and Democratic Oversight of Law Enforcement Organizations

Dr. Kobayashi received his Bachelor of Law from University of Tokyo, M.B.A. from University of Toronto, Master of International Public Administration from University of Hong Kong, Master of International Policy and Practice from George Washington University, and Ph.D. in International Studies from Waseda University. Prior to Harvard, he was the Chief of Kochi Prefectural Police. He is the author of Fundamentals of Intelligence (in Japanese; Tachibana Shobo, 2011). His articles in Japanese have appeared in Journal of International Security, Japanese Journal of Sociological Criminology, Journal of Police Science, and many others. During the 2014-15 academic year, Dr. Kobayashi's research will criminal investigation methods and democratic oversight of law enforcement organizations.

MATSUSHITA Kayo

Ministry of Foreign Affairs

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 208
kmatsushita@wcfia.harvard.edu Japan's Postwar Contributions to Peace and East Asia's Changing Strategic Environment

Ms. Matsushita earned her Bachelor of Law from Ritsumeikan University, Master of Public Policy from University of Tokyo, and LL.M. from New York University School of Law. At MOFA, she has served in the Global Issues Cooperation Division, where she drafted and negotiated U.N. General Assembly Resolution on Human Security; and in the Economic Partnership Division of the Economic Affairs Bureau, where she worked on Japan's participation in the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP). While at Harvard, Ms. Matsushita will conduct research on Japan's post-war contributions to peace and East Asia's changing strategic environment.

MELZER Juergen

Princeton University

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 301
jmelzer@wcfia.harvard.edu Transnational History of Japanese Aviation, 1910-1945

Dr. Melzer holds a diploma in Computer Science and Physics from Hagen University (Germany). After working as an airline pilot for fifteen years, he returned to school to undertake Japanese studies in 2002. He received a B.A. in Japanese from SOAS, University of London; an M.A. in Regional Studies—East Asia from Harvard University; and a Ph.D. in East Asian Studies from Princeton University. Exploring the transnational history of technology and science, his research focuses on foreign impact on the development of Japan's aviation industry. His article has been published in Contemporary Japan. During the 2014–15 academic year, Dr. Melzer plans to complete his book manuscript, tentatively titled “The History of Japanese Aviation in an International Context, 1910–1945.”

NISHIKAWA Jin

Asabi Shimbun

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 208
jnishikawa@wcfia.harvard.edu Radioactive Waste Management in Japan and the U.S.

Mr. Nishikawa earned in B.A. in Engineering and M.A. in Environmental Sciences from University of Tsukuba. He is a science and medical writer for Asabi Shimbun, where he has written extensively on nuclear power (including the Fukushima disaster) and nuclear safety and radioactive waste in Europe. His other articles have addressed public health issues (such as HIV, TB, and malaria) in Africa and Japan's policies toward scientific research. As a Fulbright Visiting Scholar during the 2014-15 academic year, Mr. Nishikawa will investigate nuclear waste management in Japan and the U.S.

OSHIMA Hidehiko

Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 302
hoshima@wcfia.harvard.edu Impact of U.S. Agricultural Policy Reform on the Global Food Supply

Mr. Oshima earned his Bachelor of Law from University of Tokyo. His most recent position at MAFF was Senior Policy Planner of the Policy Planning Division at the Minister's Secretariat. He has also held Director or Deputy Director posts in the Agricultural Production Bureau, Forest Agency, Fisheries Agency, and Food Agency. He has also been seconded to posts in the Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications, Financial Services Agency, and Noda City Office. Mr. Oshima's research at Harvard will examine the impact of U.S. agricultural policy reform on the global food supply.

SAKAMOTO Kazuyuki

Sankei Shimbun

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 307
ksakamoto@wcfia.harvard.edu Japan's National Security Strategy and the U.S.-Japan Alliance

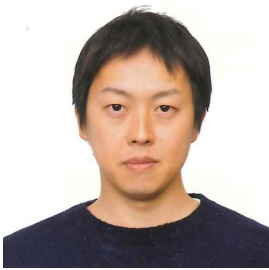

Mr. Sakamoto received his B.A. in Applied Physics from Seikei University and was a non-degree student in the Management of Technology (MOT) program, at the Graduate School of Engineering, Tokyo University. As a political correspondent of Sankei Shimbun, he has written on a wide range of topics, including Japanese diplomacy and security, the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), G8 Summit, and G20 meeting. He has also been assigned to cover the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA), Ministry of Finance (MOF), and the Japanese Prime Minister's Office. At Harvard, Mr. Sakamoto will conduct research on Japan's national security strategy and the U.S.-Japan alliance.

SOMETAYA Ryuta

Asahi Shimbun

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 302
rsometaya@wcfia.harvard.edu Media and Political Leadership in Japan and the U.S.

Mr. Sometaya earned his B.A. in Urban Sociology from Hitotsubashi University. Most recently, he served as a Staff Writer in the Osaka Headquarters of Asahi Shimbun. He has also served in the Kobe and Tottori Bureaus. His articles have covered Toru Hashimoto, Mayor of Osaka City and leader of the Japan Restoration Party; a wide range of news in Osaka, Kobe, and Tottori, including crimes, local schools, child abuse, and tourism; and local and national elections. Mr. Sometaya's research at Harvard will examine the relationship between media and political leadership in Japan and the U.S.

STERNSDORFF CISTERNA Nicolas

Harvard University

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 301
nsternsdorff@wcfia.harvard.edu Food Safety after Fukushima Nuclear Accident

Dr. Sternsdorff Cisterna is a cultural anthropologist who specializes in the study of food. He earned his B.A. in Anthropology and International Development studies from Trent University, M.A. in Political Science from University of British Columbia, and Ph.D. in Social Anthropology from Harvard University. He is a cultural anthropology who works on food, disaster studies, science and technology studies (STS), risk, and the senses. His dissertation, "Food after Fukushima: Scientific Citizenship and Risk in Japan," was based on two years of fieldwork on food safety after the Fukushima nuclear accident. During the 2014-15 academic year, he plans to complete a book manuscript based on his dissertation, and will also teach Anthropology 1804, "Tasting Food: Politics, Science, and Senses," in the fall semester.

SUDA Wataru

Ministry of Finance

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 307
wsuda@wcfia.harvard.edu Evolution of Financial Supervisory Systems in Japan and the U.S.

Mr. Suda received his B.A. in Sociology from Kanazawa University. At the Ministry of Finance, he has served as the Director of the Overall Coordination Division, Tohoku Local Finance Bureau, and as Deputy Director of the Securities, International Affairs, and Corporate Disclosure Divisions at the Financial Services Agency. Most recently, he was the Director of the Overall Coordination Division, at the Japan Mint's head office in Osaka. Mr. Suda's research at Harvard will examine the evolution of financial supervisory systems in Japan and the U.S.

TERADA Shinichiro

KDDI Corporation

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 307
sterada@wcfia.harvard.edu Business Ecosystems of the Mobile Industry in the U.S. and Japan

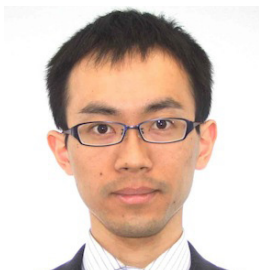

Mr. Terada earned his B.A. in Economics from Keio University and M.B.A. from University of Chicago, and is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Technology Management for Innovation, Graduate School of Engineering, at University of Tokyo. He has served as Head of Management Group at KDDI Research Institute Inc., Director of KCOM, Inc., and President of KDDI Creative Inc. He has presented his research findings at the International Telecommunications Society, Japan Society of Information and Communication Research, and other conferences. Mr. Terada's research at Harvard will investigate the business ecosystems of the mobile industry in the U.S. and Japan.

USUI Ken

Ministry of Foreign Affairs

office
e-mail
research project

61 Kirkland Street, Room 302
kusui@wcfia.harvard.edu Chinese Foreign Policy and the U.S.-Japan Alliance

Mr. Usui received his Bachelor of Law from University of Tokyo. In his last position at MOFA, he served in Ocean Division of the International Legal Affairs Bureau, where he handled maritime issues related to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS). He has also been assigned to the Aid Policy and Management Division of the International Cooperation Bureau, where he managed the fiscal affairs of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA). Between 2012 and 2014, he studied the Chinese language, diplomacy, and history at Nanjing University. While at Harvard, Mr. Usui will conduct research on Chinese foreign policy and the U.S.-Japan alliance.